The present work is intended to afford to the beginner who is unacquainted with this method of filling, a knowledge of it in all its scientific bearings, and to be a faithful guide and adviser during his practical study of it; but I hope it may also give to those who are already skilled, various information hitherto unknown to them and much that will stimulate them to independent work in this field. The preparation of porcelain fillings is a labor demanding much endurance and patience, and not a small degree of accuracy and skill. It requires a willing thoroughness devoted to apparently unimportant details, and it should not be supposed that it makes less claims on the operator than filling with gold. Yet, since porcelain fillings will in course of time become indispensable to every dentist, the sooner a good degree of skill can be attained in their use the greater will be the successes achieved. In the June number, 1898, of the Deutsche Deutsche Monatschrift fur Zahaheilkrunde, I published an article on the new Porcelain Enamel of Dr. Jenkins, which was the first German publication of the new method. Although I could...
