 .square of valour stand: And never yield one foot, but with the blood Of paltry life, earth-life: doing the right, Because it is the right; as if we could Obey no other reason. Then the night Will gleam and look on us with many a star; And we shall live among the things that are Eternally, --held precious in God s sight. Then, if men would forget us, they will keep Each thought, each word, each smallest act of ours Part of their souls for ever. Though we sleep In our still graves, and many days and hours Steal past the unletter d mounds, and dew and rain Soften the flesh; clearer than towns and towers Our memory s record shall be. Men shall gain, Because we gain d; shall flourish, yea, and be, Because we were: and after-husbandry Shall reap great harvest from our scatter...
