A Popish spelling-book, which was shewn to me during my visit to the valleys, and entitled, Correttissima santa croce per istruzione de fanciulli, or A corrected Christ ? cross roio for the instruction of infants, contains the following curious version of the decalogue, in which the second and fourth commandments are both omitted, and an injunction for the observing of festival days is substituted for the command, that we should sanctify the Sabbath. 1. I am the Lord thy God, thou shalt not have another God before me. Take not God s. name in vain. 0 In a vary old manuscript, in which is found a copious exposition of the doctrines of the Vaudois, the sixth Echqnillon quotes the words of the second commandment, as they are now learnt by the ypung catechumens of the present day. 3. Remember to keep the festivals holy.: 4...
